Residents Come Together For Clean-up Effort After High Winds Damage Trees, Structures

Brenda Engleman Coon snapped this picture of the Clouse property in the north part of town after a wind storm brought down large trees on a carport. The scene was much the same in town and rural areas, as residents spent most of the week cleaning up.

Neighbor was helping neighbor, and volunteers answered the call for help after a severe storm hit Arnold in the evening hours last Tuesday, June 27. Winds gusting to an estimated 100 miles an hour downed trees, damaged homes and buildings, caused electrical damage to at least one home and left the town without power for several hours.

In the north part of town, Cheryl Carson was home alone when the roof blew off her house.

"I got things secured outside, and just got inside, when I looked out the front window and all six posts on our porch were sucked out. I saw the soffit go and headed for the closet. I saw the roof lifting and raise up," she said. "The roof trusses stayed in tact, but we have water damage on the whole west side of the house. The main bulk of the roof rested in the backyard, but we found part of it across the road in the ditch.

She said it was 8:52 p.m. when she called husband Sean, to tell him the news. Sean, who is the Logan County Sheriff, was on an emergency call west of Arnold on Highway 92 near the Halstead feed yard, where two power lines had gone down on the highway. A mini van, with two occupants inside, drove into the lines and was tangled up. The Arnold Fire Department was called out to assist with traffic control. Custer Public Power used line cutters to free the mini van. No one was injured.

The next day, Kelly Allen with the National Weather Service came to the Carson home site, estimating winds at that location gusted up to 116 mph.

Crews worked into the wee hours of the morning to restore power to the area.

There was major damage to trees at both the recreation area and Arnold cemetery south of town. The road leading into the rec area was barricaded off, and a call went out for volunteers at both sites. Many people showed up with equipment and to provide physical labor. Due to the work by village personnel and those volunteers, a wedding ceremony scheduled for Saturday at the rec area was able to be held and campers were enjoying the lake.

Rural residents also reported damage to trees and structures.

July 2 Events Cut Short

Several events were scheduled in town on Sunday, July 2, to celebrate Independence Day, but gathering storm clouds, lightning and fire calls in the late afternoon cut everything short.

Fire department members were cooling off the kids with a spray hose and sprinkler in front of the fire hall, when a fire call came in. Fire Chief Eric Nelson said two calls came in that afternoon and evening, but both fires were put out by rain.

Also scheduled were a horse-shoe pitching contest, a meal of hotdogs and chips to raise money for the theater and the fireworks display, which was pushed back to the 4th.
